Hello my name is Andres Rivero, and I'm from the state of California. I am writing to say that I believe Microsoft as a company has done so much for the USA and the world, that they deserve much more graditude than what they are receiving. People are quick to point out all the small faults they have, but delay to their great advancements in helping people connect, work, have fun.

After being able to work out an agreement with the DoJ. Microsoft was going to offer computers for schools, and then other companies quickly moved in to halt their offering. Why must everything MS do be something with a hidden cause?

The United States of America was built upon one of the ideas that a person should be and individual and try to advance. Not be stuck in a monotonous group. Microsoft is a company, that is striving to advance, innovate. Sure, just like people, companies make mistakes. But all mistakes are learned upon and have and effect on our future choices. Case in point, I hope that Microsoft has learned from things that they have fumbled upon in the past, and continues to provide great services to the people of the USA and the world.

Thank You,
Andres Rivero
